Dear Readers/ Research Scholars,

Mathematics has become the part and parcel of modern science and technology. For any innovation in the fields of engineering and modern technology, one must be thorough with the basics of Mathematics. Without the background of Mathematics, one can't go ahead in these fields. Such is the importance of mathematics. But unfortunately we find that some of the students at the level of high school itself develop a kind of fear towards Mathematics. They feel that Mathematics is a difficult and critical subject. This phobia makes them run away from the subject. It is our bounded duty to drive away this fear and create interest in them. We have to explain them that a thorough learning of fundamentals makes the study of Mathematics very easy. A regular practice also helps to get command on the subject. So my dear researchers let us think about this also and do our might to drive away the fear from the new generation.

*“Practice makes man perfect
That gets grip on the subject”*
